Children's Museum of Southeastern Connecticut Offers Autism, Sensory Friendly Programs

Niantic, CT — The Children's Museum of Southeastern Connecticut, 409 Main St., offers events for families with children that are autistic or require a sensory-friendly environment.

The first program, held on Sunday, Jan. 6, 10-11:30 am, features Kendra Alling, a certified music therapist. She introduces various music activities and shares information about music therapy with the families.

On March 15, 6-7:30 pm, the Denison Pequotsepos Nature Center comes to the Children's Museum, bringing some of their animals and other items for hands-on learning.

Both programs offer a quiet time in an accessible environment for self-guided fun that is enhanced with the help of specialists experienced in autism/special education. The events are free, sponsored the Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Connecticut.

Call (860) 691-1111 to register. For information visit www.childrensmuseumsect.org.
